Homily by Fr. Tommy Lane

(...) People like to trace back to the origin of things. Jesus ordained the apostles as the first priests during the Last Supper, as we see in John 17th where Jesus prays that they be consecrated and today bishops continue to ordain men to the priesthood.

Indeed all the life in the Church, all the grace of the seven sacraments that we receive in the Church comes from Christ. The ministry of the Church is a continuation of the ministry of Christ.

In many other ways we also see the life of the Church coming to us from Jesus. Jesus made Peter the first Pope saying, "...you are Peter, and on this rock I will build my church..." Jesus gathered the apostles around him so that they would see him and listen and learn from him. They spent three years learning from Jesus to become the first priests. Today the Church has special colleges called seminaries to prepare men to become priests just as Jesus taught his apostles and we could say that the time the apostles spent learning from Jesus was the first seminary. Then Jesus ordained the apostles as the first bishops during the Last Supper and our bishops today are the successors of the apostles. In so many ways we see that all the life in the Church, all the grace we receive in the Church, comes from Christ. The ministry of the Church is a continuation of the ministry of Jesus.

Jesus sent out the seventy(-two) on a mission. They were to preach in all the places where Jesus would later go. Not long before this in Luke 9:1-10, we read that Jesus had also sent out the Twelve Apostles on a mission to preach just like these seventy(-two). When the seventy(-two) came back they were rejoicing because demons submitted to them and when Jesus had sent out the Twelve he also gave them power over demons. So, we see Jesus sending the seventy(-two) on a mission very similar to the mission he gave to the twelve apostles a short while previously. We see the seventy(-two) sharing in the mission Jesus gave to the Twelve Apostles. Priests are the assistants of the bishops, and, like bishops, priests are also ordained in the Sacrament of Holy Orders though of course they do not receive the fullness of the sacrament like bishops. Pope John Paul II saw the seventy(-two) sharing in the mission of the Twelve Apostles, pointing forward to the priests of the Catholic Church because priests are assistants to the bishops. Pope John Paul II was not the first to point out that these seventy(-two) were anticipating the priests of the Catholic Church because in the early centuries the Church also viewed the seventy-two in this way but it was good that Pope John Paul II reminded us of this once again (Wednesday audience, March 31, 1993 §4). All the life in the Church, all the grace we receive in the Church comes from Christ. The ministry of the Church is a continuation of the ministry of Christ.

(...) All the life, all the grace we receive in the Church really comes from Christ on Calvary. The Church is continuing the ministry of Christ. The seventy(-two) sent out by Jesus on mission were anticipating the priests of the Catholic Church. The future blessings which the prophets often predict are the life and grace we receive in the Church from Christ.
